UNIT 1   BHARATA ON RASA

Contents
1.0   Objectives
1.1   Introduction
1.2   The Natyasastra – a Curtain Raiser
1.3   The term Rasa
1.4   The Rasa Sutra
1.5   The Key Concepts of Rasa Theory
1.6   Bharata’s Rasa Theory
1.7   Let Us Sum Up
1.8   Key Words
1.9   Further Readings and References

1.0. OBJECTIVES

The principal objective of this unit is to introduce you to the concept and theory of Rasa as propounded by Bharata Muni in Natyasastra (hereafter NS), which is known to be one of the first, most comprehensive and luckily largely extant treatise on Natya Drama, Music and Dance. It is primarily aimed at offering an exposition of the principles and canons of theatrical presentation to the practitioners of these art forms, Natya was Bharata’s prime interest but as the concept of Rasa was potent enough, it rose to the status of one of the most foundational concepts of Indian art and aesthetic tradition. This unit will make an effort to explain why Rasa is so important to Natya and how could it earn for itself, later, the status of the soul of theatre. Since various basic concepts of Rasa-principle are so interlinked that it is not easy to understand one without understanding the others. This unit will introduce you to some such key concepts enabling you develop a comprehensive understanding of Bharata’s theory of Rasa.

By the end of this unit, we are sure, you should be able:
- to gain a basic understanding of the Bharata’s concept of Rasa
- to comprehend the meaning and significance of the key concepts of Rasa-theory.
- to know the elements and the process of realization of Rasa.
- to learn the intent and significance of Bharata’s theory of Rasa.

1.1. INTRODUCTION

As you open Chapter I of NS which discusses the origin of Natya you find sage Atreya accompanied by some fellow sages visiting Bharata Muni. Normally introductions do not begin with questions but that could well be said about ordinary treatises. NS is no ordinary treatise and we see an extra-ordinary question-answer session begin in the beginning itself. More than just a question-answer session it appears as if a performance of a Natya on Natya has begun. The protagonist Bharata, responds to the queries of the sages almost like a personified tradition of Natya. Move further and you see him in multiple roles – sometimes he prescribes like a seasoned instructor, sometimes he comments like a true visionary and sometimes he elaborates a technique like an experienced performer, while his detailed instructions are benefiting the practitioners of Natya. His pregnant statements are throwing challenging art scholars to reveal the underlying aesthetic principles. Rasa is one such principle. When Bharata states: There is no Natya without rasa, he clearly reveals the significance he attaches to Rasa. The script has evidence of no such question being asked by someone but even if some one has asked Bharata - It there Rasa without Natya? He would definitely not have said No? The tradition that was established is a proof. Rasa was destined to cross over- forms, influence other media and become one of the most significant concepts of Indian Art and Aesthetics. Scholars know it that the Rasa theory is founded on a deep study of our internal stimuli, psychosomatic and behavioural patterns, expressions, gestures, attitudes, postures, bodily movements, language of humans, even colours, costumes, embellishment and music were not left out. Bharata’s entire endeavour was aimed at developing a semantic of emotive communication (Rekha Jhanji, 1985) through which live actors would reproduce this world to live spectators in a living theatre (Promod Kale, 1979).

In what follows we shall try to find answers to some very simple but significant questions viz.– What is Rasa?, What constitutes Rasa?, What is its nature?, How it is produced?, How it is related to its constituents?, Does it happen to everybody? Besides, we will also be trying to see how and why Aesthetics and Art should move together.

1.2. THE NATYASASTRA – A CURTAIN RAISER

Even at the cost of repetition we say NS is one of the earliest surviving and most comprehensive practical treatise on Natya, primarily addressed to the practitioners. Written in Sanskrit, this encyclopaedic work is quite unique in many respects. In its presentational style and mythological content it appears to be closer to a Purana, in its prescriptive nature and practical approach (more so due to its own title) it effuses the credence of a Sastra. Above all the text itself refers to a fifth Veda – Natyaveda, created by Brahma by taking words from Rigveda, music from Samaveda, movements and make-up from Yajurveda and emotional acting from Atharvaveda. This Natyaveda was created so that it should be accessible to all the four varnas. On this ground many deem it to be a work based on divine revelation. Keeping several factors and elements like use of vocabulary, study of rhetoric and metrics, figures of speech, mythological references, references or allusions in the then contemporary works, review of contemporary dramatic literature, arya verses mentioned in NS, techniques and styles etc. many scholars have acceded that original compilation must have been accomplished not earlier than 2nd century B.C. and not later than 3rd century A.D. Scholars also largely agree that the extant versions of the text are reconstructed from some texts which might have been available in 7th or 8th century A.D.?

The issue of its authorship may not be of much philosophical significance but it is an issue which has really drawn the interest of many scholars. It is true that the text itself talks of a Natyaveda originally created by Brahma but since the referred Natyaveda is not available, nothing could be said about this mythological reference and thus Brahma is not accepted as the author. Alternative names of Adi Bharata, Satasahasrikara also crop up in the researches but scholars largely agree that Bharata Muni could be the author or the compiler of this text. Authorities like Adya Rangacharaya maintains that Bharata may not have been the name of any one individual rather the name could stand for the descendents of a clan or it could be a family name directly associated with the practice and promotion of stagecraft.

‘Abhinavabharati’ - Abhinavagupta’s most famous, most elaborate and most respected commentary on NS, mentions some names of the scholars like Matṛgupta, Bhattodbhata, Bhattalollata, Srisankuka Bhattatauta and Bhatta Nayaka, who attempted commentaries on NS, unfortunately none is extent (You will read more about some of these commentators in the following units.) The extant versions of NS have come to us through the great retrieving efforts of many eastern and western scholars. NS is a comprehensive treatise extending to 36 (also 37 in a few versions) Chapters. Starting from the origin of Drama to the construction of theatre, Tandava Nṛtya, Purva Ranga, Rasa, Bhava, Abhinaya, stage walk, Pravṛtti, Vṛtti, Nature of Drama (Lokadharmi and Natyadharmi). The plot, sandhis, siddhi music, to descent of drama on earth, NS has it all. However, for our present concern we can refer to Chapters on Rasa and Bhava.

1.3. THE TERM RASA

The journey of the term Rasa in different worlds of tradition has been marked by some interesting excursions, some metaphysical highs and finally a confident entry in to the world of Art and Aesthetics. At the extreme end of the range of its connotation, Rasa stands for the Absolute (Raso Vai Sah – Taittiriya Upaniṣad (II-7)) and at the other extreme it stands for Soma Rasa-a divine intoxicant. In Ayurveda it stood for mercury (parad), in Kamasutra it was used to mean Eros/love/passion, In Samkhya philosophy Rasa figures when the evolutes of Prakṛti are discussed. Well aware of these diverse meanings Bharata very rightly picked up the concept of Rasa to stand as the very purpose of Natya, the very essence of Natya and the very touchstone of Natya. Bharata discusses Rasa in Chapter VI popularly called Rasadhyaaya and here the first significant and a very poignant statement he makes is - There is no Natya without Rasa (NS, VI-31) and a little later he submits a very simple definition of Rasa – because it is enjoyably tasted, it is called Rasa (NS, VI-3) So one could say that for Bharata Rasa meant the essence of the play without which no meaning would proceed and if there is no Rasa no Natya will exist. Bharata may not have explicitly stated in NS but what he meant by the term Rasa could be the state of enjoyment, the aesthetic experience of the spectators.

1.4 THE RASA SUTRA

Rasadhyaaya carries a quintessential aphorism which could well be said the blue-print of Bharata’s concept of Rasa. It states – “vibhavanubhava vyabhicarisamyogad rasaniṣpattih” (VI, 31) and its literal meaning is-“From the union of vibhavas (Determinant conditions) anubhava (consequents) and vyabhicari bhavas (ancillary emotions), rasa (aesthetic delight) is realised” This Rasa sutra, cryptic, yet subtle, spells out the recipe of the realisation of rasa. It states that different elements of natiya like vibhavas, anubhava and vyabhicari bhavas conjoin to bring out Rasa. It is believed that Bharata has conspicuously omitted sṭhayibhava from this aphorism besides not spelling out anything concerning how the union of all the elements take place and finally after the union takes place how the rasa is realised.
Omission of sthayi, from the rasa sutra did inspire a lot of debate later but scholars largely seem to agree that it is sthayibhava only which finally evolves into a rasa. Besides the mention of three vital components of rasa, Rasa sutra also mentions two more terms ‘Samyoga’ and ‘Rasa-Nispatti’ which Bharata leaves to the wisdom of the practitioner. However, eventually both these terms turned out to be polemical and lead them to a productive Rasa-debate. It could well be said Bharata may not have given a theoretical elaboration of the sutra alright but he did compile one full treatise for the benefit of the practitioners to find out how the three elements i.e., vibhavas, anubhava and vyabhicari bhavas should conjoin to effectuate Rasa.

1.5 THE KEY CONCEPTS OF RASA THEORY

Rasa theory is built around some very significant key concepts. All these concepts represent vital elements of theatre contributing their own significant inputs to produce a Natya aiming at realising Rasa for refined spectators. A thorough understanding of these concepts will help us to understand the Rasa theory better. In what follows we will study some such key concept of Rasa theory.

1. Bhavas – Bhavas are called so because they become or bring into being (bhavyanti) and help convey the desired meaning. They enable the natya to realize its rasa to ensure that its poetic meaning has been conveyed. Bharata gives a lucid definition of Bhavas: “That which conveys the meaning intended by the poet through words, physical gestures and facial changes is a Bhava.” (NS VII/3). Broadly speaking Bhavas refer to all the elements like vibhavas, anubhavas, vyabhicari bhavas and sattvika bhavas but in the Chapter VII on Bhavas Bharata largely discusses sthayibhavas, vyabhicari bhavas and sattvika bhavas totalling to 49 in all. In a broader sense Bhavas mean the originating cause of actualisation and evocation of rasa. Bharata made a clearcut distinction between real life emotions (Bhavas) and emotions depicted in drama (Natyabhavas) Natya being an imitation of life, real Bhavas can have their counterparts as Natyabhavas as well.

2. Vibhavas and Anubhavas – Vibhavas are made of patterns of life and serve as cause or stimuli of emotions. Explaining its etymological meaning Bharata states – The word vibhavas....is synonymous with Karna, nimit and hetu. As words, gestures and the representation of the emotions are vibhayate (determined) by this it is called vibhavas (NS VII/3). These are elements which produce a desired emotion and determine the nature of consequent representation of emotions. Like manhandling, dragging, insult quarrel or debate and similar factors will act as vibhavas to evoke in us a feeling of wrath (Krodha). These stimuli could be external, existing in the external world or internal existing in the mind. (See table of find out different vibhavas for different sthayibhavas).

Anubhavas are bhavas which ‘show up’ on characters after some stimuli (vibhavas) has had their impact. They include the bodily movements, attitudes and facial expression by which the feelings are expressed by the artist and made to be ‘felt’. To manifest a feeling of wonder, widely awake eyes, raised eye brows, constant gaze etc. are some of the anubhavas used by actors. Anubhavas are the outcome of vibhavas and make the spectators aware concerning the dominant emotions, theme of the play. They can be those behavioural patterns which represent the evocation of similar emotions in spectators. Anubhava in considered fact constitute the real skill and art of the performers. Bharata talks of four types of Abhinayas (Histrionic representations) Angika (Bodily) Vacika (Verbal) a Sattvika (involuntary acting) and Aharya (Back stage inputs) Performers are directly involved with the first three types of Abhinayas.

3. Sthayibhava (permanent emotions) – Human life has some fixed emotive patterns, universally present and integral to our life. They are a set of eight permanent emotions, which are subtle in nature and depend on other elements for their representation. Etymologically sthaya stands of abiding and continuing and bhava means existent. These innate, enduring, assimilative and dispositional traits of human nature are dormant and when activated they develop into an expressive and distinct emotive pattern which get manifested through some minor transitory states, bodily movements and involuntary actions.

Being universally present the artists use them as objectifying principles to give their art work structural unity by unifying other elements of the work through them. Bharata did not give any specific reason why are sthayibhavas, sthaya. Giving the illustration of a king and the subject he explains one may each sthaya is a king because of its position and rest of the minor bhavas are its subject. In other words sthayibhavas being subtle, they cannot express themselves, they gets manifested through these vyabhicari bhavas only. It is very interesting to learn that like (8) sthayibhavas, Bharata enlists a limited 33 number of vyabhicari bhavas only. At times vyabhicari bhavas serve multiple sthayibhavas. (See table-I). King sthayibhavas do share their limited vybhicari subjects with other king sthayibhavas. Today, when we categorises plays, stories and even films we refer to the dominant emotions they delineate. For example we talk of a tragic play, a comic story, a romantic poem or a horror film. We must accept that modern art- forms have gone beyond these eight sthayibhavas now.

4. Vyabhicari Bhavas (also called Sancaribhavas) – Besides these limited number of sthayibhavas Bharata talks of 33 transient, ancillary, temporary, fleeting emotions which do not just accompany sthayibhavas but represent, reinforce and re-echo them. These emotions are minor, temporary and transitory, they emerge and fade and in the process portray the dominant emotions. Soka for instance could be expressed through some of the following vyabhicari bhavas - indifference, anxiety, delusion, weeping and change of colour (here sattvikabhavas are acting as vyabhicari bhavas) (See table-I for more similar examples). By working out a calculated conglomeration, of course, based on a careful observation and analysis, Bharata has worked out a very brilliant schema for the manifestation of sthayibhavas. Natya is a mirror of life, Bharata holds, through these well worked out recommendations of combination of different vyabhicari bhavas to evoke a particular sthayibhavas Bharata tells actors precisely how it can be done. But he cautions actors also that he is not formulating absolutely exhaustive and closed set of combinations of these vyabhicari bhavas, rather he accords some good creative freedom to the practitioners of these art form.
It is quite interesting to note that Bharata allows, at times, some sthayibhavas also to perform a double role as vyabhicari bhavas. Bhaya is a sthayibha but in the manifestation of Soka it acts as a vyabhicari bhava. (See table for more similar examples). The role of a vyabhicari bhava and their prescribed arrangement in the manifestation of dominant emotions could be likened to the role of a WORD in discursive language. Like words the meaning assigned to one vyabhicari bhava could also be altered according to a different context. There are some vyabhicari bhavas which appear for three or four sthayibhavas.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Vyabhicari Bhavas</th>
<th>Sthayibhavas</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
1) If we express the Rasa-sutra in a mathematical expression it will be like one of the four equations given below. Identify the correct equation.

\[ \text{a) Vibhava} + \text{Sthayi Bhava} + \text{Vyabhicari Bhava} = \text{Rasa} \]
\[ \text{b) Vibhava} + \text{Rasa Bhava} + \text{Sattvika} = \text{Rasa} \]
\[ \text{c) Vyabhicari Bhava} + \text{Sthayibhava} + \text{Anubhava} = \text{Rasa} \]
\[ \text{d) Vibhava} + \text{Anubhava} + \text{Vyabhicari Bhava} = \text{Rasa} \]

2) Differentiate the following:

\[ \text{a) Rasa from Sthayi Bhava} \]
\[ \text{b) Sthayi Bhava from Vyabhicari Bhava} \]
\[ \text{c) Vibhava from Anubhava} \]

1.6 BHARATA’S RASA THEORY

Bharata declares that Natya is an anukarana (imitation) of life and the entire enterprise of Bharata in NS is aimed at instructing the practitioners to ‘recreate’ or ‘reproduce’ life by putting up a production through their enactment and several other theatrical elements. All this is aimed to create an aesthetically relishable unique experience called Rasa. What is this unique relishable experience called Rasa? Let us see.

Bharata opens his Rasadhyaya by asking these questions “what constitutes Rasa?” “What are the Rasas expert speak?” and a little while after he introduces a simile drawn from the word of cuisine to explain what he means by Rasa, he explains, Rasa is said so because it is something to be relished. Like various condiment, spices, herbs and other food items are blended and cooked to prepare a delicacy which is ready for a relishable tasting, similarly performers produce rasa out of the union of vibhava, anubhava and vyabhicari bhavas. What comes out after this unifying, creative, assimilative and engaging enterprise is an aesthetical state for the spectators to be relished and known as Rasa. Bharata did not elaborate much on Rasa, like a good chefs, he was more concerned with giving a good recipe for a good delicacy. Chefs do not talk of good flavour and good taste they are sure of it. So was Bharata of his Rasa. His recipe of allowing a prescribed union of vibhava, anubhava, vyabhicaris to arouse sthayi so well worked out that Rasa has to emerge to enchant the refined spectators. One can easily make out his Rasa is a state of mind, nothing like any mundane state it, a state of intense absorption which is emotionally charged and an essentially delightful savouring experience.
Bharata never attempted writing or even working out a formal theory of rasa. It is probably later thinkers, more so his commentators, who were rather amusingly inspired by the ambivalence of some of his concepts that they started looking for a theory of Rasa in an out of out practical treatise. In the rasa-sutra mentioned earlier you must have noticed how Bharta talks of the production of Rasa. The union of all the three vital ingredients untiedly awaken the sthayibhava of the refined and involved spectators. The awakened sthayibhava gets metamorphosed in to rasa – an experience which is pure pleasure par excellence. For theoretical interest two problems of this theory are of great interest. i) How the Rasa is Manifested (Rasa-niṣpatti). ii) How the Rasa emerges from the union of the three vital elements of natya (Samyoga) of Vibhava, Anubhava and Vyabhicari Bhavas. As said earlier much of later commentators based their commentaries on answering these questions

Another issue of theoretical interest is what is the basis of Rasa? Nowhere Bharata seems to mention that it is the sthayibhava which is going to evolve into a rasa but when he likens sthayi to a king he makes his intent clear. Obviously out of all 49 Bhavas all bhavas cannot be portrayed, the artist has to focus some where. His observations were based on human psychology, modern psychology has so much to speak on these issues today, prompted him to select only those feelings which are more prominent, more dominant, more visible and more live in the world. Hence he considered only eight sthayibhavas. Since these sthayibhavas are just latent to human psyche they need to have external manifestations through certain minor and transient emotions. He gives a whole list of such transient emotions and even works out their prescribed combination to depict the desired sthayi. But even this depiction cannot achieve the desired goal of achieving rasa so he brings in the services of sattvika bhavas. These emotions lend vibrancy and truthfulness to the emotional depiction. Besides these emotional elements he had a lot many theatrical devices like costumes, stage, accessories, music, dance which he integrated into the theatrical rendering. Rasa is realized only when all these elements are set according to the prescribed cannons which are based on observations of the way of word.

Although referred as traditional this verse seems to sum up a Bharata’s idea of Rasa in a very vibrant manner. “A meaning which touches the heart creates Rasa; the entire body feels the rasa like fire consuming a dry stick” (NS VIII/7). Rasa is what embodies Natya, Rasa is what the artists strive for and Rasa is a state of consciousness wherein the spectators have not only apprehended the import of the artists but also felt its experiential aspects in a blissful state.

Kind of Rasas

Bharata mentioned eight Rasas, Adbhuta, four as major rasas and four are subsidiary rasas which come from their corresponding major rasa are considered. Hasa comes from Srngara, Karuna comes from Raudra, Adbhuta comes from Vira and Bhayanak comes from Bhibhatsa. Given below is a brief introductory account of the major rasas you may refer to the Table for a glimpse of the remaining for subsidiary rasas.

1. Srngara Rasa – Srngara is stated as the most important Rasa in NS. Since love is the most dominant feeling in life its representation in theatre, obviously, draws, a lot of attention. Based on the sthayibhava of Rati it is, set in beautiful surroundings to delightful music on beautiful location. It is depicted by men and women of healthy youth by raising eyebrows, side glance, graceful steps and except laziness, cruelty and disgust all 30 vyabhicari bhava could be seen in action. It is of two kinds: Sambhoga (fulfilment) and Vipralambha (separation).

2. Vira Rasa - Vira Rasa has utsaha (enthusiasm) as its sthayibhava and it is normally associated with noble and brave individuals and their heroic deeds. Its stimuli include, determination, courage, justice, strength, bravers etc. and it is expressed through fearlessness, steadfastness, skilfulness, unrelenting nature. Its vyabhicari bhavas are self confidence, excitement, memory, self consciousness, self command. It could be acted out by throwing challenges, courageous deeds, showing boldness and expressing self confidence.

3. Raudra - Raudra emerges from the sthayibhava of krodha (anger) which is normally associated with evil persons of violent nature, who cause fights, its stimuli are harsh words, cruelty, spite provocation etc. It is acted through beating, hitting, dragging, bloodshed, inflicting pain and its emotied through red eyes, knitting of eyebrows, puffiness up of cheeks etc. Its vyabhicari bhavas include energy, cold-blooded animality, excitement, intolerance, cruelty along with sweating and stammering.

4. Bibhatsa – Emerging from the sthayibhava of Jugupsa (disgust) Bibhatsa is stimulated by listening or touching, even tasting, smelling or seeing, undesirable, loathsome, ugly things, in evil settings. It is represented by withdrawing the body, by leering, spitting and showing agitation, holding nose, hanging the head or walking stealthily. Its vyabhicari bhavas includes agitation, lots of memory, excitement, confusion, sickness, death etc.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Vibhavas</th>
<th>Anubhavas</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1. The season (spring) garlands, anointment. Putting on ornaments, company of dear ones, living in beautiful abodes, gardens, witnessing pleasant things, indulging in sports and games etc.</td>
<td>Playfulness of eyes and eyebrows side glance graceful steps and gestures etc.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Disfigurement of dress, decoration, queer behaviour, distorted speech, disfigured gestures, imprudence, greediness, mistakes etc.</td>
<td>Expanded lips, nose and cheeks, wide staring and contracted eyes, sweating or red face holding the sides etc.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Curse, pain, calamity, separation from dear ones, loss of wealth, death, execution, imprisonment, exile, accident and misfortunes etc.</td>
<td>Tears, crying, losing colour of face, drooping limbs, sighs, absent mindedness etc.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
4. Anger, boldness, insult, lies, injury, provocation, harsh words, cruelty, revengefulness etc.
   - Reddening of eyes, knitting of eyebrows, grinding of teeth, biting of lips, puffing up of cheeks, rubbing of palms, etc.

5. Having a clear mind, determination, discipline, modesty, strength, bravery and brilliance etc.
   - Display of courage, and steadfastness, boldness, large mindedness, skills etc.

6. Hearing strange voices, seeing strange objects, fear of jackals and owls, deserted house or lonely forests, hearing about execution or imprisonment of dear ones etc.
   - Trembling of hands and legs, fast to and fro moving eyes, gooseflesh covering the body, pale face, breaking voice etc.

7. Hearing or seeing or feeling of undesirable, ugly and evil etc.
   - Withdrawing body, nausea, leering, agitation, face pinched, walking stealthily, holding nose etc.

8. Sight of divine persons, fulfilment of desires, large assemblies, tricks and magic, entering beautiful temples or gardens etc.
   - Unwinking and widening of eyes, words of appreciation, exclamations, joy, trembling, stammering, thrilled body, tears etc.

---

Table depicting Rasas, their Vibhavas, Anubhavas, Sthayi bhavas, presiding deities and colours.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Vyabhicari Bhava (also Sthayi in the capacity of Vyabhicari)</th>
<th>Sthayi Bhava</th>
<th>Presiding Deity</th>
<th>Colour</th>
<th>Rasa</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>All vyabhicaris except indolence and cruelty. Also all Sthayis except fear and disgust.</td>
<td>Rati (Love)</td>
<td>Viṣṇu</td>
<td>Dark Blue</td>
<td>Śṛngara (Erotic)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.</td>
<td>Weakness, apprehension, envy, weariness, indolence, inconstancy, sleep, dreaming, dissimulation.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>----</td>
<td>--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Hasa (Laughter) Pramatha White Hasya (Comic)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3.</th>
<th>Discouragement, weakness, depression, anxiety, stupor sickness, death, weeping (sattvika)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Soka (Sorrow) Yama Pigeon Colour Karuna (Pathetic)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>4.</th>
<th>Cold-bloodedness, energy, excitement, intolerance, deceit, cruelty, vanity, sweating and stammering.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Krodha (Anger) Rudra Red Raudra (Furious)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5.</th>
<th>Understanding, poise, arrogance, vengeance remembrance excitement, horripilation and change of voice (both sattvika)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Utsaha (Enthusiasm) Mahendra Yello Vīra (Heroic)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6.</th>
<th>Death, fright, also perspiration, horrification, change of voice, trembling or change of colour (All sattvikas)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Bhaya (Fear) Kala Dark Bhayanka (Terrifying)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7.</th>
<th>Intoxication, despair, Epilepsy, sickness, madness, death also fear (sthayi)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Jugupsa (Disgust) Mahakala Blue Bhibhatsa (Odious)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>8.</th>
<th>Distraction, joy, agitation, also stupor, paralysis, perspiration, horripilation, fainting (all sattvikas)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Vismaya (Astonishment) Brahma Yello Adbhuta (Marvellous)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Table depicting Rasas, their Vibhavas, Anubhavas, Sthayi bhavas, presiding deities and colours.

1.7 LET US SUM UP

Bharata’s NS, the oldest surviving practical treatise on stagecraft establishes Rasa, to be the desired objective of a production, performers and spectators. After introducing the concept of Rasa and its key elements the unit sketches out Bharata’s Rasa theory which is largely based on the observations of the ways of the world and application of psychology of human emotions. It further delineates the process how vibhava, anubhava, vyabhicari bhavas conjoin together to produce Rasa, which went on to become one of the central concepts of Indian art and aesthetic.

1.8 KEY WORDS

Anubhava – (consequents/sensors) Response of emotions external manifestation, deliberate involuntary through which feelings are represented.

Bhava – (feelings/states/emotions/modes of being) A wider term referring to Vibhavas, Anubhavas, Sthayibhavas, Vyabhicari Bhavas and sattvika Bhavas.

Natya – (drama/play) Composite theatre of drama, dance and music.

Rasa – (flavour/taste/essence/integral/aesthetic experience/dramatic emotions) NS talks of eight such Rasas, realization of which is the objective of the performers and the experience of which draws spectators to theatre.

Sattvika Bhavas – (Psycho-physiological response/spiritved modes) Certain involuntary consequents depicted by highly involved and concentrating actors, like sweating, weeping etc to create realistic effects in theatre.

Sthayibhavas – (permanent mood/dominant emotion/fundamental mental states) NS talks of eight of such dominant emotions which are universally present in all human beings.

Vibhavas – (determinants/indicators/stimuli) The causes (the human and the material) which determine the evocation of desired feelings in the audience.

Vyabhicari Bhavas – (transitory/complimentary/ancillary/states of emotions/inconstant modes)

1.9 FURTHER READINGS AND REFERENCES

